SECTION A – 2 MARKS

Q1. (a)

Personality is the set of behaviours, thoughts, emotions and habits that make a person unique. It reflects how a person reacts, communicates, thinks and presents himself in different situations, and it is shaped by heredity, environment and situation.

Q1. (b)

Attitude is a mental state involving beliefs, feelings and behaviour towards a person, object or situation. In simple words, it is how we think and feel about something, which affects how we behave; it may be positive, negative or neutral.

Q1. (c)

Conflict management is the process of handling disagreements or arguments between individuals or groups in a peaceful and constructive way. It uses techniques such as compromising and collaborating to find a solution instead of blaming.

Q1. (d)

Leadership is the ability to influence, guide and motivate others to achieve a common goal. A leader shows the way, supports the team and helps it succeed.

Q1. (e)

Group discussion (GD) is a structured conversation in which participants express their ideas and opinions on a given topic within a time limit. It is used in placements, entrance exams and job selection to test communication, thinking and leadership skills.

SECTION B – 5 MARKS

Q2.

1. Attitude and values of the perceiver: A person sees things through his own beliefs and values, so two people may judge the same event differently.
2. Past experience: What a person has experienced before shapes how he interprets a new person or situation.
3. Interests, needs and expectations: People notice what interests them or what they expect to see, and ignore the rest.
4. Situational factors: The time, place and environment in which something is seen affect how it is understood; a loud voice at a party and in an office are perceived differently.
5. Target factors: The features of the person or object observed, such as appearance, behaviour, novelty and size, influence the perception formed.

Q3.

Self-awareness is the ability to understand your own personality, emotions, behaviour, strengths and weaknesses. Its benefits are:

1. Realistic goals: Knowing your strengths and weaknesses helps you set goals you can actually achieve.
2. Better decisions and emotional control: You understand your feelings, so you think before reacting and decide wisely.
3. Stronger relationships: Understanding yourself helps you understand others and get along well with them.
4. Knowing how others see you: It shows how your behaviour affects people, so you can improve your image.
5. Self-improvement: It helps you work on weak areas; for example, a person who gets nervous in public speaking can practise in small groups to build confidence.

Q4.

1. Clear vision and strong communication: An effective leader knows the goal and explains it clearly to the team.
2. Confidence and decision-making ability: He takes firm and timely decisions and faces problems with confidence.
3. Empathy and emotional intelligence: He understands the feelings of team members and controls his own emotions.
4. Integrity and honesty: He is fair and truthful and keeps his word, so people trust and follow him.
5. Ability to motivate and support others: He encourages the team, helps members grow and gets the best out of them.

Q5.

1. Personal interview: A one-on-one discussion between the candidate and one interviewer.
2. Panel interview: Several interviewers question one candidate together, each judging a different area.
3. Telephonic / video interview: The interview is conducted remotely by phone or video call, often as a first round.
4. Group interview: Several candidates are interviewed together to see how they behave and communicate in a group.
5. Behavioural interview: It focuses on the candidate's past experiences and actions, and is best answered with the STAR method (Situation, Task, Action, Result).

Q6.

Communication is the process of exchanging information, ideas, thoughts and feelings between people. Its process is: sender → message → medium → receiver → feedback.

1. Sender: The person who starts the communication and puts the idea into words, symbols or gestures (encoding).
2. Message: The information, idea or feeling that is to be shared.
3. Medium or channel: The method used to send the message, such as spoken, written or digital.
4. Receiver: The person who receives the message and understands its meaning (decoding).
5. Feedback and noise: Feedback is the receiver's response, which completes the process; noise is any physical or emotional disturbance that spoils the message.

Q7.

1. Specific: The goal must be clear and well-defined, not vague.
2. Measurable: Progress must be trackable, so that you know how much has been achieved.
3. Achievable: The goal must be realistic and possible with the time and ability you have.
4. Relevant: It must match your personal or career aims, so that it is worth the effort.
5. Time-bound: It must have a fixed deadline. Example: "I will improve my spoken English by practising 30 minutes daily for 3 months."
